READ MORE: 'We can solve many problems through talks' – Russia & China agree to discuss border row China does not recognize Russia's assertion of sovereignty over the Northwest Passage, which Chinese President Xi Jinping calls the Chinese "sacred land" and the "lifeline of the nation." Read more Russia has long insisted that any discussion of a possible oil and gas pipeline in the Arctic Ocean must take into account the territorial status of Russia's Northern Region. At the same time, Chinese President Xi Jinping has repeatedly accused Russia of encroaching on its territory, especially in East Siberia, with the so-called New Silk Road project. "The information that Russia plans to unite and expand its military presence in the Asian region, is designed to stimulate anxiety among our Asian neighbors," Chinese Lt. Gen. Liu Bingjun said in the statement. "On the contrary, our military exercise, as a part of Russia's consistent and comprehensive approach to ensuring regional stability, can encourage China and other countries to prepare for a conflict in the region." Li also noted that the growing number of China's forces along its border with Russia will continue to serve as a "protective shield" for Beijing, and hinted at the possibility of China asserting its military power on the territory it considers to be rightfully its own. "The ongoing process of raising Chinese armed forces' capability in the Asia-Pacific region forms a balance of power in the region and can ensure long-term peace in the region," Li said. Russia and China are in the midst of preparing for a naval patrol of the territories off the coasts of South Korea and Japan, the two countries to which they both have most tense relations with. It is connecting fine when running on localhost via http and https but whenever I try to connect from outside the network, I get a 404 not found. Here is my server code: Any idea as to why this might be happening? A: Add a % to the end of your URL. My websocket server needs: -H "Origin:" A: This happens when the WebSocket connection is made from a different server than the one running the server code. In that case the request must be processed with the headers correctly set. Otherwise the server can't interpret the request and the request is thrown away. You can try requesting the socket server from a different web browser. The browser then uses the standard WebSocket request headers. I just bought this today to compare to the Sennheiser HD 530 and found that it's less than half the price of the HD 530. So I thought I'd make my review. Mainly because I was in Toronto the other week where the Fostex D7 was handed out with other audio gear and I wanted to know if anyone else had a chance to try it out. When I say "hand out" I mean that they handed out D7's which is also a performance mic. The mic on the left is a D7 and on the right is the Fostex. I also got a chance to use the HD 530 and the D7 as well. The ba244e880a
