According to the request of the client, the classification server may transmit a classification result to the client. If the classification result indicates that the subscriber is associated with a first class, the client may initiate a service for the subscriber. The implementation of an application service may comprise a first sequence of communication events and a second sequence of communication events. A first communication event may be based on a first communication protocol and a second communication event may be based on a second communication protocol. The first and second communication events may relate to two different communication entities. A communication entity may comprise a plurality of communication channels and a plurality of functional units. The plurality of communication channels may comprise two or more communication interfaces. The plurality of functional units may comprise a plurality of functional devices. The plurality of functional devices may comprise a plurality of functional modules. An example of a communication entity may be a node of a telecommunication network. A communication channel may be a physical connection between the node and another node or a device. The functional devices may comprise the functional modules that are adapted to perform a specific function. A communication protocol may be the lowest layer
