To report our 5-year experience with videolaparoscopy in the treatment of endometriosis and its long-term results. Retrospective review of a prospectively maintained database. University hospital. Women older than 18 years who had undergone videolaparoscopy for endometriosis (n=400) from January 1998 through December 2003 were included in the study. Treatment protocol for all patients consisted of excisional or ablatinal cystectomy, adhesiolysis, removal of endometriosis-related pelvic scars, and intraligamentary oophorectomy. The disease stages were graded according to revised American Society for Reproductive Medicine criteria. Long-term outcome was monitored using a questionnaire and by telephone interviews. The questionnaire results revealed that all patients were satisfied. Overall, 293/400 (74.3%) of patients had disease recurrence during the 5-year follow-up period. However, recurrence rates were significantly lower for patients with stage I-II endometriosis than for those with stage III-IV disease (16.3% vs. 44.4%, respectively, P 09e8f5149f

SysINFO Free Download [Win/Mac]

A free Windows-based application that's designed to help you keep an eye on your system's performance and general status. Clean and intuitive looks When closed, the application should be able to retreat to the notification area, to prevent from interfering with your regular activities, but still be able to perform its tasks. Easily monitor your system's CPU and Internet usage SysINFO is able to retrieve and display information about various different areas of your system, such as 'CPU Info', where you can learn what your PC's processor type is, the number of cores and the level of usage in percentage. The 'RAM Info' section displays the 'Total' available memory, the currently 'Used' amount and the 'Free' memory, while the 'NET Usage' function informs you of your total Internet traffic, as well as the downloaded and uploaded data. In the 'Video Info' field, you can find out how much video memory you have at your disposal. SysINFO is quite handy, but both its functions and its appearance allow little room for customization. In addition, the utility features a rather slow reaction speed, particularly when you try moving it to another location on your screen. I have existing Perl based application, which is a web-server running, and I want to have a python process running on that same server. The way to achieve this is to execute python process from Perl, but I want to go a step further. I would like to convert that Perl application in Java. I have looked at various options available like, Macros JavaCarpet Runtime.getRuntime().exec() etc But most of them(almost all of them) work in the way that they assume the way the executable runs is either they save a file or echo some text to a file. For my project it isn't the case. Please
