Note When you're done with your file, save it as a _Photoshop CS (compressed)_ file (`.psd`) or an _Open Portable Document_ (`.opd`) file. You can save your file as anything besides those two. If you save the file as a compressed (`.psd`) file, Photoshop automatically saves a copy in the `.psd.001` to `.psd.100` files. It also saves a copy in the `.png` file format. If you save the file as an `.opd` file, Photoshop creates a collection of files, each of which is named according to the date and time it was created, with a file extension of `.opd`. In order

We have for you a list of Photoshop and Photoshop Elements professionals and tools. These are for those who work daily with images and want all the tools available. Photoshop Elements For most of us, Photoshop is the standard for image editing. With Photoshop, you can add shadow effects, edit colour, flip, rotate and resize your images. Read also: Photoshop tutorials

Lightroom is a standalone photo management and editing app from Adobe. It is available on iOS, Android, macOS, Windows, and the web. It's a single app that enables photographers to manage their RAW images and sliders. These are your photos in high quality with which you can edit them.

Lightroom mobile Lightroom can access your mobile and desktop computers to store images, including RAW images and sliders. Lightroom mobile They can save your sliders anywhere you like. You can also edit them. The text tools allow you to replace sliders with text and many other possible edits.

Lightroom is very fast, because it is only downloading the photo and not storing it locally.

Lightroom has many useful tools for editing images such as cloning, layer, rectangles, lens corrections, exposure adjustments, adjustments, and so on. You can also work with presets. These presets have all the standard corrections that you may need for your image. Lightroom can save images automatically, based on the current settings, location, and light. When you take a photo, Lightroom can automatically save it. Then, you can edit the image, create a slideshow, or edit the individual images from your camera. Photoshop for Photoshop Elements For people who work with images only, Photoshop Elements is an ideal option. This tool has an array of tools for editing images such as cropping, layer effects, logo design, and much more. The most useful feature of Photoshop Elements is its ability to automatically find and replace duplicate and similar images. You can use the tool to get rid of duplicate images. These may be photos, social media profiles, or blog posts and so on. You can increase the quality of pictures using sharpening and recovery tools. This tool is simple to use. 05a79cecff

Q: Java HTTP POST request with custom JsonObjectRequestBody I have a REST web service in my Android app which consumes http POST request. The request body I am receiving from the client contains some information, e.g. country, state, city and so on, encoded as JSON objects. However, when I want to pass these objects to my web service, I need to use a custom JsonObjectRequestBody in order to use Jackson library to parse these JSON. This is my custom JsonObjectRequestBody: public class CustomJsonRequestBody extends JacksonJsonObjectRequestBody { private static final long serialVersionUID = 6568258284680971772L; private final String mResource; public CustomJsonRequestBody(String resource) { this(resource, String.valueOf(JSON_DICTIONARY_DIFFERENT_ID)); } public CustomJsonRequestBody(String resource, int dictionaryId) { this(resource, dictionaryId, false); } public CustomJsonRequestBody(String resource, int dictionaryId, boolean encoded) { super(new JSONObjectRequestBody(dictionaryId, encoded)); mResource = resource; } @Override protected JSONObject buildJSONObject() { return new JSONObject(mResource); } } The source code of the main component which generates the json body for http request: private class CustomBody extends ArrayList { private static final String

DEFAULT_DICTIONARY_ID = "1"; public CustomBody() { this(1,
CustomBody(int dictionaryId) { this(1, dictionaryId);
} public CustomBody(int dictionaryId, int idRange) {

Category: Civil Rights A network of Chinese and U.S. activists, university students, and citizens from across the United States and Taiwan have jointly launched a civil rights campaign to highlight the wealth gap between the top 10% and bottom 10% of income earners in China. The campaign, which was inspired by recent findings from New York University's China Labor Bulletin, also aims to encourage action from labor and human rights groups in both countries. The group plans to stage three major protests in Shenzhen. The first is being held on March 15. Similar events are also being organized by the group in other cities. To wage this campaign, the group has formed an online coalition and issued a joint statement jointly with labor and human rights group China Labor Watch. Among other things, the statement calls for China to adhere to its own labor laws; to respect civil, political, economic, and social rights; and to take measures to reduce wealth inequality. One of the protesters, Zhang Feng, is a doctoral student from New York University's School of Law. He has spent time in China since 2006, studying labor conditions and speaking about and teaching about democracy and human rights. Before he arrived in China, Zhang said he worked on a production line in a factory in New Jersey. "In China, there were no labor laws and no guarantee of any factory's right to organize," he said. "The factory didn't have any human resources department. There were no names on the door and no letters from the government. There was just an A in a glass box on the door.” In China, he said, people who did not like the way management or the factory treated them could resign and return home, and management’s actions were largely without consequence. “But in America,” Zhang said, “many people believed in what the United States stood for, and they decided to come to New York and start over. But when they arrived, they could not find jobs here.” He traveled to Shenzhen for his doctoral research because, he said, China is where the world’s economy is booming and has become the global manufacturing center. The economy, he said, is creating the most wealth and opportunity for the Chinese people. “People should be allowed to use this wealth to develop their own lives,” he said. “The market economy should
